Boy's death 'tragic and preventable'

TORONTO'S DEADLY STREETS

Official moves quickly to enact changes after 5-year-old killed

David Hains
Metro | Toronto

The City of Toronto will immediately look at "any and all safety measures" to improve Lake Shore Boulevard W. and Jameson Avenue following the death of a five-year-old.

The boy was killed near the intersection Wednesday evening. He was cycling with a guardian, fell into the road at 6:20 p.m. and was hit by a Toyota Camry. He died in hospital that night.

"It's devastating news," said city public works chairwoman Jaye Robinson. "I can't imagine what the family is going through."

Robinson told Metro she asked city staff first thing Thursday morning to undertake a review and "consider any possible improvement" to the area.

Possibilities include introducing more photo radar, advanced green lights for pedestrians as well as technology that can sense when pedestrians need to cross.

Pedestrian safety advocate and lawyer Patrick Brown was also shaken by the news, calling it "awfully tragic and preventable."

He called for a barrier to be installed immediately to protect cyclists and pedestrians on the Martin Goodman Trail from the Lake Shore.

Brown said "it was so obvious" that this was a dangerous stretch of the typically safe trail, adding he wishes he lobbied for it before the tragedy. He also stated that the speed limit on Lake Shore should be lowered.

Lake Shore Boulevard was not identified as one of the city's 2016 or 2017 priorities based on collision data, according to Transportation Services.

Mock trials help refugees plead case for asylum

IMMIGRATION BOARD

Matthew House program aids appearances before IRB

Sarah-Joyce Battersby
Metro | Toronto

Biruktawit arrived in Toronto from Ethiopia last October with two little boys, a plea for asylum and no idea how a courtroom worked.

"I had all the facts. I was prepared with my lawyers. But I really didn't know how to express the fear I had of going back to my country," she said. (Metro has agreed not to print her last name in order to protect her privacy.)

Like many refugees, Biruktawit had to plead her case for asylum before the Immigration and Refugee Board (IRB). She had three months to prepare.

She learned how to express herself at Matthew House's mock refugee board trial program.

"We simulate more or less exactly what happens at the IRB," said Helton Achaye, who spearheaded the program's creation at the Toronto charity in 2012.

To begin, Achaye tapes a laminated printout of Canada's coat of arms to the wall and hangs a maple leaf to transform the space from a church basement to a crucible where fates are sealed.

"They are symbols of the sobering country that Canada is," he said. Seeing the space as a seat of authority conditions people to tell the story in a more formal manner.

Achaye would know. A political refugee from Uganda, he faced the IRB himself after his 2011 arrival.

The feelings are "very raw," he said, adding the anxiety can make a person seem unsure or confused. Worst-case scenario: an application is refused based on performance issues rather than the persecution. For many it's a pivotal moment.

"If they fail their hearing, they can be deported back to a place of torture or death," said Anne Woolger, founding director of Matthew House. "It's vital."

Peter Showler, a refugee legal scholar and former chairperson of the IRB, said it's an "excellent" program. In fact, he donated to its establishment.

"Most refugees are frightened and terrified when they go into the hearing room. That's not a good psychological condition for someone who is about to testify," he told Metro, adding he would like to see it expand.

With recent grants from the Law Foundation of Ontario and the Toronto Foundation, it is. Woolger said there is potential to partner with large law firms and other non-profits.

The Toronto Foundation chose to support the program because it's a "shareable idea," said Julia Howell, vice-president of community engagement, in an email.

She pointed to its track record, crediting its creation by a refugee as a key element of its success.

For Acahaye, the program plays perfectly into Matthew House's holistic approach.

"It's like a family," he said. "We remain a community through and through."

That might be why, on a recent afternoon months after she and her family had been granted asylum and moved out of the shelter, Biruktawit and her sons visited Matthew House to drop off a thank-you gift: lilies for the garden.

The laminated coat of arms helps set the scene at mock trials, says creator Helton Achaye. Achaye helped to establish the mock refugee trial program to help others like him navigate the process upon their arrival in Canada. EDUARDO LIMA/METRO

TRANSIT

Pilot allows riders to load TTC monthly pass onto card

The TTC is starting with a rollout of 2,000 adult and 1,000 senior loadable Metropasses for the trial. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Transit riders can now load a TTC monthly pass onto their Presto fare cards.

According to notices quietly posted to the Presto and TTC websites Thursday morning, a limited number of June monthly passes — the equivalent of a TTC Metropass — can be purchased online and added to customers' cards.

The development is a landmark for Presto, which will eventually become the primary form of payment on Toronto's transit system. The monthly Metropass is the TTC's main fare media, and making its equivalent available on the electronic fare card is a key part of transitioning away from older ways of paying.

"This is another positive milestone in the Presto rollout at the TTC," said TTC spokesperson Heather Brown in an email.

"Throughout 2017 and 2018 we will gradually introduce other pass products, such as student and post-secondary student passes, on Presto as we transition away from tickets, tokens, and passes for the full adoption of Presto."

The TTC Monthly Pass on Presto will cost the same as a Metropass — $146.25 for adults and $116.75 for seniors — and will go on sale eight days before the start of each month.

Like a Metropass, the Presto version will allow customers unlimited travel on the TTC for a month. According to the TTC, the only difference is that riders using the monthly Presto pass will have to tap on a fare card reader, while Metropass users are asked to show their card to fare collectors, drivers and fare inspectors, or swipe it at a turnstile.

For the moment, the monthly pass product is only available via the Presto website, although physical cards can be purchased at Gateway newsstands in the subway system and at 10 Shoppers Drug Mart outlets in Toronto.

Roughly 2,000 adult and 1,000 senior passes are being made available for June. Brown said that limiting their number will give the TTC and Metrolinx, the provincial transit agency that owns the Presto system, "the opportunity to evaluate the customer experience."

"This will ensure we can provide the best possible product once we roll it out to a wider audience," she said.

The TTC expects to increase the number available over the course of 2017 and 2018.

UNION PEARSON EXPRESS

Moving on UP: Higher ridership, but still high subsidies on train service

The province is subsidizing the Union Pearson Express.
TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Ridership on the Union Pearson Express (UPX) increased during its first full year in operation with lower fares, but the provincial transit agency has declined to say how much the airport train service is costing the public.

According to figures provided by Metrolinx, the provincial agency that operates the line, 2.76 million people took the UPX during the fiscal year April 2016 to March 2017. Three-quarters of passengers were travelling to or from the airport, while the remaining riders used it for other reasons.

The ridership figures are a significant improvement compared to the air rail link's first 10 months, when only about 747,000 people used the train.

Ridership spiked after Metrolinx slashed ticket prices in March 2016 in response to public pressure. Initially, a ride between Union and Pearson cost $27.90, or $19 with a Presto card. Tickets are now $9 with a Presto card, or $12 without.

Metrolinx spokesperson Anne Marie Aikins said the agency is "very pleased" with the new numbers. "The ridership level has grown much faster than we had even hoped for," she said.

She could not yet disclose how much the government is subsidizing each ride on the UPX.

A Torstar News Service analysis of 2016-2017 data provided by Metrolinx suggests that the UPX per ride subsidy could approach $20 per ride.

By comparison, the TTC subsidizes its passengers at a rate of about $1 per trip, while GO Transit's subsidy is less than $1.50 per passenger.

New bike lanes part of a broader vision

Commuters can look forward to an easier, faster ride through Kensington Market this summer with the addition of new bike lanes.

Running from Queen Street to College Street using Denison Avenue and Bellevue Avenue, the lanes are part of the 10-year cycling network plan designed to create a grid by connecting major routes with residential streets, explained Coun. Joe Cressy. "This is to connect the lanes on College down to Richmond and Simcoe, but it's part of a broader vision to ultimately connect from the waterfront all the way up to Bloor Street," he said.

A 10-year cycling network plan is designed to create a grid by connecting major routes with residential streets. METRO FILE

The lanes will be "contraflow," meaning they make it legal for cyclists to go both directions on a one-way street.

"Right now we have hundreds of cyclists every day riding illegally. This is legalizing a behaviour that's already going on and making it safer in the process," he said.

Cressy said the ward has one of the highest populations of bike commuters in the city, and better infrastructure will get even more people on two wheels.

Hamilton to study plan for 'prescription' air conditioners

May Warren
Metro | Toronto

For Kemba Robinson, an air conditioner is not a luxury but a lifesaver.

Robinson has asthma, as do her son and daughter, and having AC in their Jane and Finch apartment means fewer attacks and a better night's sleep for everyone during sweltering summers. "The heat along with the smog, it makes the air quality unbreathable," said Robinson, a member of tenant advocacy group ACORN. "The AC doesn't have to be too high; it's just to bring the temperature down to a manageable state."

About 500,000 people in Toronto live in older apartment buildings, and most lack central air, according to a recent Toronto Public Health report.

Meanwhile, in Hamilton, council voted this week to study the idea of providing air conditioners to low-income people with health conditions exacerbated by extreme heat.

"It's a medicinal tool," said Hamilton councillor Sam Merulla, likening it to a prescription as people would have to get a doctor's note to receive one.

He hopes the plan could also save on money the city spends to move vulnerable people to cooler spots during heat alerts.

Toronto Public Health recently declined to recommend a bylaw that would have forced landlords to prevent extreme heat, like there is for cold.

Between 2000 and 2009, Toronto experienced an average of 20 days per year where the temperature rose above 30 degrees Celsius.

The number of days with temperatures above 30 degrees Celsius is projected to more than triple by 2040 to 2049.

60

About 60 per cent of people in older apartments reported losing sleep or feeling thirsty during summer heat waves, according to the agency.

Carol Mee, manager of healthy public policy at Toronto Public Health, wrote in an email Thursday that their approach focuses on access to cool spaces in the community and retrofitting buildings to make them more energy efficient.

She added that recent consultation found older apartments lack proper insulation and duct work for window AC units to work effectively as a widespread solution.

PETS POLICE MARINE UNIT'S PURR-FECT NEW OFFICER
There's a new cop on patrol at the Toronto Police Marine unit and he takes no prisoners. Last year the unit rescued a "wet, cold and frightened" cat near Billy Bishop Airport. When he was found "Porter" had health issues says Const. Rich Baker, a community service officer with the unit. Notices were put up about him but no one came for the cat, so the unit officially adopted him.

Things to do in the city this weekend

Gilbert Ngabo
Metro | Toronto

This weekend is poised to be the first time the city can kick into full-blown festival mood. Here's Metro's guide to what's going on.

Doors Open Toronto 2017
Under the theme TO Canada With Love, the city is letting the public explore some rare 150 historic and cultural buildings this Saturday and Sunday. Check out sites like the Aga Khan Museum, Bergeron Centre for Engineering Excellence or the Mackenzie House among many others.

Barbados on the Water Festival
Harbourfront Centre will be the meeting place for the largest celebration of Barbadian culture with vibrant music from a rich lineup of DJs and artists, a literacy event and kids' activities. There'll even be rum tasting sessions. The festival runs Friday through Sunday.

Pedestrian Sundays:
This year's Kensington Market Pedestrian Sundays series will kick off May 28 with streets shut down to cars and open to outdoor activities between 12 and 7 p.m. Artists, musicians and performers will be on hand to help celebrate the spirit of an independent community.

Africa Day:
The folks behind the largest African music festival in North America, AFROFEST, are kicking off this year's edition with Africa Day at Adelaide Hall this Saturday. It's a fun way to bring African Canadians together to celebrate Toronto's diversity. More AFROFEST events will be held throughout June and July.

150+ Reasons We Love Canada:
VIBE Arts has worked with Canadian youth to create and paint 60 inspiring murals that will be displayed in subways and airports across the country as we celebrate Canada 150. The murals will be officially unveiled Friday at Scarborough Town Centre.

Council backs budget freeze

ECONOMY

Vote passed, divisions and agencies to keep 2017 levels for '18

Council backed a budget freeze target while killing efforts to implement a stormwater fee as the second, rainy day of the meeting was consumed by the two debates.

A 30-14 vote directed all city divisions and agencies to present ways to keep their budgets at 2017 levels next year. When inflation is factored in, that's the equivalent of cutting two per cent from the $11-billion operating budget.

Mayor John Tory and his council allies rejected an attempt by the left flank to exempt some programs from that target, including services for vulnerable residents, such as the overburdened shelter system, poverty-eduction programs and staff levels at long-term care homes.

Tory stated repeatedly a freeze is just a starting point and gave examples where spending increased this year — such as the TTC and Toronto Public Health — despite a request for a city-wide 2.6-per-cent reduction in 2017. Tory told council he feels reassured he has taken a "balanced approach" as he is facing criticism from two extremes: those who call him a "wreckless spender" and others who label it "an austerity approach."

The city faces an initial budget shortfall of $343 million in 2018 if property taxes are not raised by an amount above an estimated two per cent rate of inflation, something Tory and his allies will not support. In the evening, council nixed a plan to bring more fairness to who pays the rising costs of stormwater runoff and protection against basement flooding.

With a 27-16 vote, council followed the recommendation from Tory's executive committee to "receive," or shelve, a city staff recommendation to go back to the drawing board and return to council in 2019 with a proposed framework for stormwater fees.

Currently, the $275 million annual cost of dealing with runoff water is funded by a charge on water bills, so residents and businesses that use more water pay a bigger share of that cost.

Death by numbers

Scarier than SARS, deadlier than car accidents and if it was called the Turkey Flu, there would be a mass panic underway. The crisis of opioid addiction and overdose continues to grow. Ontario has launched a new online tool to visually track up-to-date information on emergency visits and deaths from powerful painkillers. The data shows 412 Ontarians fatally overdosed in the first six months of 2016, including 91 in Toronto. In 2015 — the most recent year with detailed data — men accounted for almost three-quarters of opioid deaths in Toronto. Fentanyl was responsible for more deaths than any other drug. GENNA BUCK/METRO

Nigel Wright, former Chief of Staff to Prime Minister Stephen Harper, leaves the courthouse after his testimony at the trial of Mike Duffy on Wednesday, Aug. 19, 2015.

Harper's top aide was in ethical wrong, says watchdog

Stephen Harper's former top aide, Nigel Wright, was never charged with a criminal offence, but his efforts to repay $90,000 of Mike Duffy's Senate expenses were a breach of federal conflict rules, according to a new report.

More than a year after an Ontario criminal court acquitted Duffy in the Senate expenses affair, and four years after the federal Ethics and Conflict of Interest Commissioner began and suspended her investigation, Mary Dawson finally reported Thursday on Wright's role.

She fingered Harper's former chief of staff for ethical blame on two fronts — when he pressed the Conservative party to repay Duffy's bill, and when he decided to do so himself.

Dawson concluded Wright broke the rules for public office holders that prohibited him from making decisions that would further another person's private interests — Duffy's — and barred him from influencing the decisions of anyone else, such as the Conservative party's chief bagman Irving Gerstein, to further Duffy's interests.

There is no penalty for violating those two sections of the act.

"The only sanction is the negative publicity resulting from the release of the examination report," her office said.

Dawson's report is a politically difficult one for the Conservative party as it struggles to move on from the Harper era, and a personally difficult one for Wright, now a London-based financier.

"My intention throughout was to ensure that the taxpayer was repaid for Sen. Duffy's expenses. I have always believed, and still believe, that my effort to get those funds repaid was in the public interest. We'll take the time to review and understand the report," said Wright in a statement issued Thursday by his lawyers.

Wright was never charged for making a payment to Duffy, though Duffy was charged and acquitted of accepting a bribe.

Mayors call for action on national opioid crisis

Ryan Tumilty
Metro | Ottawa

Canada's big city mayors want tangible action taken in the country's fight against the opioid crisis, and they want the federal government to take the lead.

Vancouver Mayor Gregor Robertson said the country needs a clear road map for fighting the crisis that includes targets for reducing overdoses and fatalities and regular reporting on relevant statistics.

"We want to make sure the federal government pulls together an action table that treats this like a national emergency," said Robertson. He said all levels of government can help, but the federal government needs to be at the table ensuring the work gets done.

Robertson led a task force of mayors from across the country.

In addition to some of the measures the government has already brought in, the mayors are calling for more opioid substation programs and better data on the crisis.

Robertson said that while British Columbia — where the crisis has been most pronounced — is tracking numbers, not all parts of the country are doing the same. Ontario released new data on opioid fatalities this week, but the most recent data is almost a year behind.

The federal government has taken some of the steps the mayors called for, including most recently passing legislation that reduces the wait time for approval of a supervised-consumption site.

Health Minister Jane Philpott's press secretary Andrew MacKendrick said the minister is prepared to do more.

"We are in a national public health crisis in Canada. Minister Philpott is committed to using every lever at her disposal to combat this crisis," MacKendrick said.

The Queen visits survivors

Teens recovering from shrapnel wounds chat with monarch

Britain's Queen Elizabeth II, right, speaks to Millie Robson, 15, and her mother, Marie, as she visits the Royal Manchester Children's Hospital to meet victims of the terror attack. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Queen Elizabeth II met Thursday with children injured in the Manchester concert bombing, consoling them and pronouncing the attack at an event attended by so many young people "wicked."

The 91-year-old monarch visited Evie Mills, 14, Millie Robson, 15, and other youngsters recovering from severe shrapnel wounds at the Royal Manchester Children's Hospital.

"It's dreadful. Very wicked, to target that sort of thing," the Queen told Evie and her parents.

Millie, wearing an Ariana Grande T-shirt, told the Queen she had won VIP tickets to the pop star's Monday night concert at Manchester Arena and had been injured in the bombing attack after the end of the show. The teenager said she felt fortunate to have survived.

"I have a few, like, holes in my legs and stuff, and I have a bit of a cut, and my arm and just a bit here, but compared to other people I'm quite lucky really," she said.

The Queen broke her normal custom of wearing a matching outfit by visiting the children in a blue coat topped with a jaunty orange hat — as if to try to lighten the gloom.

Elizabeth told Millie she thought Ariana Grande was a "very good singer," adding, "She sounds very, very good."

Millie was one of 12 children under the age of 16 taken to Royal Manchester Children's Hospital by ambulance after the blast that killed 22 people and the suspected bomber.

She said she was walking toward the exit to meet her father when the bomb went off. She remembers the explosion, an intense ringing in her ears, and people screaming. Millie didn't know it right away, but she was bleeding badly from her legs.

"My dad ran over to me and picked me up and then like, we tied jumpers (sweaters) and stuff around the main wounds in my leg," she recalled Thursday. "He just picked me up and we ran outside and then a lot of paramedics outside and strangers were just helping us, really."

It was a parent's nightmare. Her father, David Robson, said he was with his partner waiting for Millie when the explosion happened.

"I saw Millie, at the bottom of the stairs, I just ran down, picked her up," Robson said.

Emergency teams eventually helped treat Millie and got her to the hospital. She was well enough to enjoy the Queen's visit. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Court deals blow to Trump's travel ban

President Donald Trump's revised travel ban "speaks with vague words of national security, but in context drips with religious intolerance, animus and discrimination," a federal appeals court said Thursday in ruling against the ban that targets six Muslim-majority countries.

The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld a lower court ruling that blocks the Republican administration from temporarily suspending new visas for people from Iran, Libya, Somalia, Sudan, Syria and Yemen.

The Richmond, Virginia-based 4th Circuit is the first appeals court to rule on the revised travel ban, which Trump's administration had hoped would avoid the legal problems that the first version encountered.

In all, 10 of the 13 judges who heard the case voted against the Trump administration.

The Supreme Court would almost certainly step into the case if asked. The justices almost always have the final say when a lower court strikes down a federal law or presidential action. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Soldiers attack militants in besieged Philippine city

Backed by tanks and rocket-firing helicopters, Philippine troops launched "precision attacks" Thursday to clear extremists linked to the Islamic State group from a city that has been under siege since a raid that failed to capture one of Asia's most-wanted militants.

Rebels have torn through the streets of Marawi, torching buildings, taking a priest and his worshippers hostage and sealing off much of the city. At least 44 people have died in the fighting, including 31 militants and 11 soldiers, officials said. President Rodrigo Duterte imposed 60 days of martial law Tuesday on the island of Mindanao, warning he may expand the decree nationwide, unnerving many who lived through the rule of Ferdinand Marcos. Is extra-sensory perception real?

Is ESP real?
- A.M, Toronto

The existence of extra-sensory perception, a.k.a. the ability of humans to supernaturally sense the future, has been established by accepted research methods, validated by statistics and the results published in reputable journals. And that means ESP is real.

Psych! Sorry, couldn't resist.

Most legitimate scientists, agree ESP isn't real. But, that stuff about research and stats and journals to prove it is true.

That reveals very little about ESP, but a lot about the reproducibility crisis in psychology.

A 2015 study in Science found only about a third of experimental results in psychology can be successfully replicated.

Why? It's not fraud (usually). It's failing to release studies with negative or unclear results, which makes published studies appear more significant. It's using the same data to generate and prove your hypothesis. It's designing an experiment, carrying it out, finding nothing, then changing the research question and scanning the data for anything that looks significant.

That's how random blips look like "proof" people can intuit which card is the three of clubs based on gut feeling.

This is starting to change. Journals are encouraging researchers to publish in-depth explanations of methods before they begin experiments. And there's more interest in repeating past research, a traditionally unsexy task.

I won't believe ESP is real until someone demonstrates a real reason; not random chance, misleading math, or people picking up on experimenters' body language. Perhaps that makes me closed-minded. But I think closing your mind against ridiculous notions is a good thing.

War Machine an 'emotional journey'

INTERVIEW

Topher Grace talks his latest project, made for Netflix

Richard Crouse
For Metro Canada

Topher Grace doesn't need me to put words in his mouth, but in this one instance I'm going to.

I recently sat down with the former That '70s Show star to talk about his new Netflix movie, War Machine. Based on the Michael Hastings New York Times bestseller The Operators, it fictionalizes the real-life career implosion of General Stanley McChrystal, Commander, U.S. Forces Afghanistan. An article in Rolling Stone that reported on the McChrystal's disappointment with Obama and his policies undid the General's distinguished career. In the film, he is renamed Gen. Glen McMahon and played by Brad Pitt, who also produced the film.

"What I love so much about the film [director and writer David Michôd] made," said Grace, "and it was in the script but I really felt it when I saw the film, is the emotional journey. That is so hard to get into a war movie. Anyone who is willing to watch it understands it on an emotional level, which is a much more effective way to communicate to the audience than just using facts."

Here's where I chime in. "I think that when you have a very specific story it can become universal because of the emotions," I said. "None of us will find ourselves in that particular situation but all of us, at some time in our lives, will end up in a mess of some kind. It's relatable."

"That's what I meant to say," said Grace with a laugh. "Can you quote yourself and use that?"

Consider it done.

Grace plays Matt Little, McMahon's civilian press adviser. He's young, brash, and, according to Grace, not the sharpest knife in the drawer.

"What is the definition of an idiot?" he asks. "Is it knowing you don't know but still going ahead anyway? I don't think it is, but that's who he is.

"On the first day, I popped my collar up and the military advisor said, 'They don't do that in the military.' The director said, 'No, no, no! He's playing an idiot. He would totally have his collar popped up.' He's a civilian and he doesn't even really care about the war going on."

The 38-year-old actor says despite the story's timely nature and the inclusion of a character based on recently disgraced National Security Advisor Mike Flynn, the film isn't political.

"I want people to check their politics at the door and take the emotional ride of what it would feel like to be in that position.

"The really cool thing is that it is not an American telling the story. David is a great talent out of Australia and no matter what, he brings a non-American POV. The fact that it can be that heightened in terms of humour at some points and so real when they are out on the battlefield is really great."

It may not be political but Grace says it is timely.

"We made it in Obama's America," he explained. "It's crazy releasing it now. It is timelier than when we shot it. I haven't been on a lot of projects that were like that."

Raunchy Baywatch

REMAKE

Humping gags and extended crotch shots

The villainous Victoria Leeds (Priyanka Chopra), in Baywatch.
FRANK MASI/PARAMOUNT PICTURES VIA AP

Of this, dear moviegoer, rest assured: Dwayne Johnson's biceps still ripple and glisten in the sunlight. So do his triceps, pecs, abs, delts, quads, lats and the other 600 or so muscles of the human body.

And that charismatic, multimillion dollar grin? Still there, too. But the dude isn't a magician. And only a true magician could find a way to make something light and fun and fresh out of the unwieldy, derivative and mostly unfunny endeavour that is Baywatch.

Now, maybe the filmmakers weren't thinking light and fun and fresh. They opted to make an R-rated film, upping the raunch factor of the '90s TV series starring David Hasselhoff and a slo-mo running Pamela Anderson. But the R rating doesn't mean they've gone all dark and deep; it just seems to mean lots of raunchy language, humping gags and extended crotch shots. That last category includes a centerpiece scene in which our two leading men, Johnson and Zac Efron, play around with a penis on a corpse in a morgue. Yes, that's actually what they do.

Let's try to wipe that image out of our brains now, shall we? Baywatch, directed by Seth Gordon, begins by establishing the heart and brawn of our main guy, Mitch Buchannon, leader of the Baywatch squad and hometown hero. We see him hurtling into the water to save a kitesurfer from certain death. Running along the beach, he ducks into a basketball game to expertly block a shot. He passes an adoring beachgoer building an elaborate sand sculpture of him.

But his PR-obsessed boss needs to embellish the Baywatch brand, so he brings in a new guy - Matt Brody (Efron), a gold-medal Olympic swimmer who has a bit of an attitude problem (any resemblance to Ryan Lochte, including mouth grill, is totally intentional.) It seems that after a night of drinking at the Olympics, Brody vomited in the pool and ruined his team's chance to win the relay. He may not be a team player, but he IS ripped, and so, after Brody shows up on his motorcycle looking all James Dean, shirts come off and we get our obligatory macho competition, which includes lifting two refrigerators at once. "This has nothing to do with saving people!" complains Brody. Mitch grunts back: "This is Baywatch!"

In any case, Brody joins the squad, which includes sexy blonde CJ (Kelly Rohrbach, running slowly), ambitious Summer (Alexandra Daddario), Mitch's co-leader Stephanie (Ilfenesh Hadera), and Ronnie (Jon Bass), chubby and awkward, in the young Jonah Hill role.

Now, if you never saw the TV show, a key point of the plot - though plot is definitely NOT key - is that these lifeguards don't just save kids in deep waters. They're also crime-solvers. So when a city councilman ends up dead in a boat fire, they figure out pretty fast that he was murdered.

But why? Could this have anything to do with villainous Victoria Leeds (Priyanka Chopra), a club owner whose ambitions for Emerald Bay include some very sinister side activities? And can the squad manage to solve the case and stay alive?

It eventually gets wearisome, despite the best efforts of Efron and especially Johnson, who can enliven any scene. His disdainful mocking of Efron's character is one of the more amusing themes, especially the nicknames he uses: "Hey, One Direction." "Yo, 'N Sync." Best of all: "High School Musical."

But darned if that quick reference to Efron's breakout franchise doesn't make you all nostalgic for some old-fashioned entertainment that didn't rely on F-bombs, crude anatomical references, or toying with a corpse. (Sorry to bring that up again, but, UGH.) JOCELYN NOVECK /THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FILM FRANCHISE

Pirates sailing into new waters

Captain Jack Sparrow might be a household name, but despite the cultural clout, the Pirates of the Caribbean franchise has gone adrift. In some ways, it's been a series of diminishing returns, and they're not done yet. As the fifth film, Dead Men Tell No Tales, prepares to set sail Friday, it's already facing a few hurdles, including a changed blockbuster landscape, a star with a diminished profile and a six-year gap between installments.

In 2003 Pirates of the Caribbean: The Curse of the Black Pearl washed ashore like a revelation – Walt Disney Studios had made a good movie based on a theme park ride, and created an iconic (and money-making) character for Johnny Depp in the process. Fourteen years later things look quite different. The films, which have earned $3.7 billion globally, got progressively worse in quality, and, after the second, Dead Man's Chest, began to fall off in domestic box office returns.

Disney has also become a different kind of studio, with their pricey but profitable acquisitions of Marvel Studios and Lucasfilm, in addition to their recent successes transforming their animated classics into live-action blockbusters.

And yet, Pirates of the Caribbean soldiers on. With a fresh set of directors at the helm in Joachim Ronning and Espen Sandberg, the filmmakers have made a good effort to return to the spirit of the first film with a new, young cast in Brenton Thwaites and Kaya Scodelario, a return of both Orlando Bloom and Keira Knightley and an Oscar-winning villain in Javier Bardem.

"The actors have worked with Disney and Jerry for many years to make this movie happen. One of the things they were worried about was to bring real characters to the movie," said Bardem. "I think they brought a different heart to it."

For Bloom, the lasting appeal is simpler.

"Everyone says, 'Why do these movies still work?' And I say, because six-year-old kids are doing pirate performances. So it's not like we kind of created anything particularly new and spectacular – although I think we did," Bloom said at the film's Los Angeles premiere.

NEW natural ingredient produces 34% more hair in 8 months!

t is known that supplements can increase hair health and volume to some degree, but to find a supplement that can increase hair growth strongly is rare. Still, this is what scientist are finding when studying palm oil extracts.

A recent study was done at the University of Malaysia with 38 people suffering from hair loss (alopecia)*. They were told to take a palm oil extract containing a special ratio of "super-antioxidants" called tocotrienols, known to lower oxidation in the scalp and thus allow for better – and new - hair growth. The results were surprisingly good!

STUDY RESULT:

Researchers studied an area of the scalp equal to 2x2 cm and counted the hairs at the beginning of the study, at 4 months and at 8 months. At the end of the study, the participants on the tocotrienol supplement had gained 34.5% more hair or an increase in average hair count from 285 to 383 hairs. Most of the group showed increases of 10-25%, but 40% of the group had more than 50% increase in hair growth. And only one person did not have any results.

Hair Count in Study Group and Placebo Group

4 ISLANDS TO VISIT IN THE EASTERN CARIBBEAN

St. Vincent and the Grenadines is a collection of 32 islands and cays in the eastern Caribbean. The opening of the Argyle International Airport will drastically change the area's tourism game with non-stop jet service now being offered from North, Central and South America, and Europe. To get the full awe-inspiring experience, island hop to a few of the more secluded resorts.

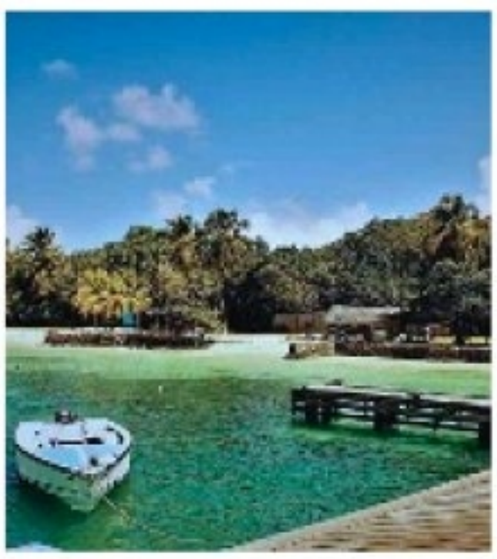
1 Palm Island

Palm Island, formerly Prune Island, was renamed after the former owners of the private island, the late John and Mary Caldwell, planted hundreds of palms, transforming the spot into a Caribbean paradise. Palm Island Resort capitalizes off of this palm-blanketed oasis by offering an eco-friendly, luxury, all-inclusive experience. Grab a resort bike and pedal to one of its secluded hammocks for a beach picnic for the ultimate relaxing afternoon. Or slip into the spa and into nirvana with a Balinese massage. Details: palmislandresortgrenadines.com

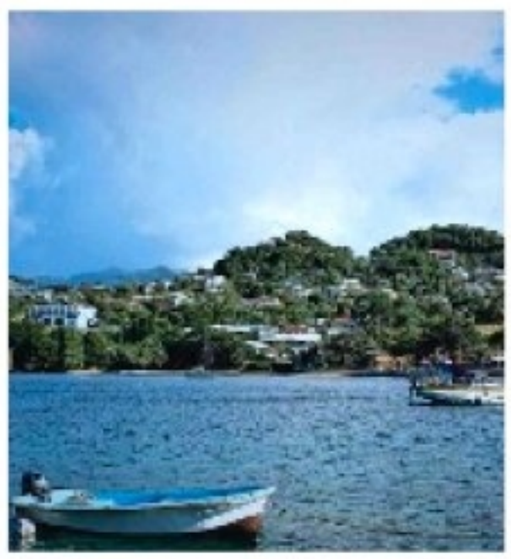


2 Petit St. Vincent

"Welcome to paradise," says a smiling Petit St. Vincent Resort employee when I arrive on this private island, the most southern of the Grenadines. And he ain't lying. This slice of heaven is all about privacy. You won't be disturbed in your remote hillside or beach villa until you hoist a yellow flag outside of your room, alerting staff that your rum punch needs a top-up or you'd like to grab snorkelling equipment to scope out the sea life outside your door. Details: petitstvincent.com

3 Young Island

Young Island is the most northerly island in the Grenadine chain, just south of mainland St. Vincent. Head to Young Island Resort for a lush getaway on the 5.3-hectare private island. Each cottage has an ocean view, with some offering private plunge pools and gazebos. Prep your palate for its famous freshly baked six loaves of breads presented to you at your table daily at lunch and dinner. The breads include white, coconut, banana, raisin, cinnamon and wheat. (My vote is for the cinnamon.) Details: youngisland.com



4 Tobago Cays

Hop on a catamaran to head to the remote and pristine Tobago Cays, a protected wildlife reserve of five islets bordered by a giant horseshoe reef. Slipping into the warm turquoise waters is like touring a sea turtle sanctuary — I swim by at least 15 shelled beauties. And though I've snorkelled my fair share, it's the first time I've got to hold a sea urchin and starfish. Details: tobagocays.org

Celebrating 90 years as Hollywood glamour spot

LOS ANGELES

Star-studded premieres still held at Chinese Theatre

King Kong made his cinematic debut there in 1933. There was a yellow "brick" carpet when the Wizard of Oz premiered in 1939. George Lucas brought R2-D2 and C-3PO along for the premiere of Star Wars in 1977, and the two droids left their marks in the cement out front.

A symbol of Hollywood's golden age, Grauman's Chinese Theatre is turning 90. Now known as the TCL Chinese Theatre, the landmark movie palace first opened on May 18, 1927.

"It's still the most amazing theatre," Cher said at a recent premiere. "I remember coming here (when) I was very small... It was so magical."

Sid Grauman's masterpiece movie house stands on a busy corner of Hollywood Boulevard, next to the Dolby Theatre where the Oscars are now presented and across the street from the historic Roosevelt Hotel, where the first Oscar ceremony was held in 1929. A Hollywood take on a Chinese temple, it boasts a pagoda-shaped roof and ornate marble carvings, with a cement forecourt filled with celebrity handprints, footprints and signatures.

The theatre still hosts dozens of premieres each year and its famous forecourt draws an estimated five million tourists annually — many of whom don't realize they can actually go inside and see a movie.

"Occasionally you'll get the tourist that comes up and asks for a restaurant reservation," said Levi Tinker, the theatre's general manager and staff historian.

A showman and entrepreneur, Grauman started building the Chinese Theatre in 1926, the same year he and other Hollywood titans established the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. He imagined an elegant and otherworldly movie palace that would transport visitors to ancient China, with its serene gardens and regal temples.

Forecourt of the Stars: A tourist places her hands inside Matt Damon's prints.

"He really wanted to give the audiences who came inside here an escape from reality," Tinker said. "So he spared no expense in getting the best artists, the best designers, and even importing elements from China."

Grauman commissioned original murals and paintings by international artists with Hollywood connections. He hired a Chinese sculptor to make statues and figures that still decorate the auditorium. He sought permission from the American and Chinese governments to bring in marble and other materials from China, including the Heaven Dogs statues that sit at the theatre's front doors. Most of the original 1927 artwork has been preserved, Tinker said.

The theatre's best-known element, the footprint collection officially known as the Forecourt of the Stars, wasn't part of the original plan. Silent film star Norma Talmadge came to see Grauman at his new building when she accidentally stepped in the wet cement out front. Inspiration struck: Grauman thought a few celebrity footprints would be a great way to promote his new theatre.

He invited his friends and business partners Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks to put their hands and feet in wet cement, and the tradition was born. More than 300 actors, directors and producers have since followed suit. Alien: Covenant director Ridley Scott added his prints just the other week. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Los Angeles declared the theatre a historic-cultural monument in 1968. Inside the historic building, the projection technology has been continually updated to stay on the cutting edge. GETTY IMAGES; THE ASSOCIATED PRESS/FILE (LEFT)

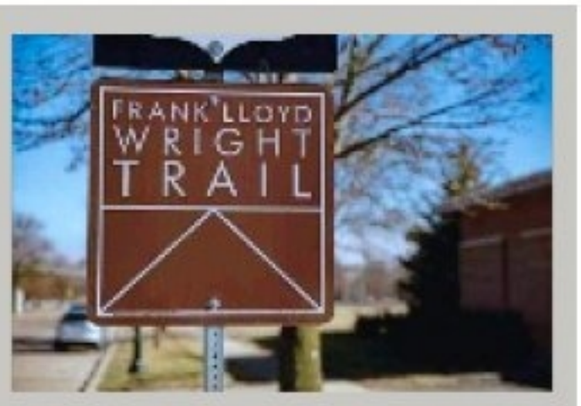
TRAVEL NOTES ARCHITECTURE, DESIGN AND OCEAN LINERS

Honouring Frank Lloyd Wright

Seven cultural organizations in western New York are uniting for a series of events commemorating the 150th anniversary of architect Frank Lloyd Wright's birth. Events, including lectures and tours, are planned from June through October, focusing on Wright's influence on the region's Arts and Craft movement. Collaborations between Wright and Buffalo's Arts and Crafts industries gave the region a large collection of masterpieces from the period. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS



Sketches for Route 66's neon signs

Hundreds of design sketches for some of Route 66's most memorable neon signs have been preserved and are now part of a university's special collection. Two professors teamed up to rescue the colourful, hand-drawn mid-century designs from a cache of old business records at an Albuquerque sign-making shop after they were deemed a fire hazard. Mark Childs and Ellen Babcock, professors at the University of New Mexico, turned the find into a book. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Exhibit: Luxury ocean liners

A museum in Salem, Mass., is exploring the golden era for the luxury liners that once crossed the Atlantic Ocean. The exhibit at the Peabody Essex Museum tells a narrative of society's love of ocean travel and how the ships evolved over the 100 years they ruled the seas. From the Titanic, there's a wooden deckchair and a piece of hand carved wooded archway, the largest surviving piece of woodwork from the wreck. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Meet history-makers during tours of B.C.'s legislature

Tours recount the history made here. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Mary Ellen Smith appears unannounced at the chamber gates and recounts the historic moment in 1918 when she rose to speak in the legislature as British Columbia's first elected female provincial politician.

"My heart was beating so loudly in my ears I could hardly hear myself think," says actor Madeleine Humeny, wearing a period costume featuring a long, dark dress and bonnet during a free guided tour of the iconic political building that dominates the landscape of Victoria's Inner Harbour.

"We were just the right women at just the right time and in just the right place," says Humeny, who remains in character to explain Mary Ellen Smith's pivotal role in leading the struggle for women's rights in B.C., and ultimately the right to vote in 1917.

Actors playing five prominent personalities from B.C.'s past are brought back to life to highlight the historical characters and events that helped shape and define the province. The actors are dressed in turn-of-the-century costumes and interact with visitors on the legislature grounds while delivering historically accurate monologues.

Other characters are Her Majesty Queen Victoria; Francis Mawson Rattenbury, the legislature's architect; Thomas Uphill, the longest serving MLA in B.C.'s history; and Amor De Cosmos, B.C.'s second premier. THE CANADIAN PRESS

NBA

Kerr not ready to return to the bench

Steve Kerr is involved in just about everything but the actual game-day coaching for the Golden State Warriors — film session, coaches meetings, game-planning and practice.

He's just not yet ready from a health standpoint to be back on the bench with the start of the NBA Finals a week away.

General manager Bob Myers made the announcement Thursday, though he didn't rule out Kerr returning at some point if he somehow is healthy enough to do so — though that doesn't appear promising at this stage.

"If he feels better and we have to make those decisions, we will, but right now we're not putting any deadlines on should he feel better what will we do," Myers said.

The 51-year-old Kerr underwent a procedure May 5 to repair a spinal fluid leak stemming from complications after two back surgeries in 2015, after the Warriors won their first championship in 40 years during his first season as coach.

IN BRIEF

Ronaldo could face tax-fraud charges in Spain

Spanish prosecutors are considering whether Cristiano Ronaldo should face charges over allegations by the country's tax agency that he defrauded the authorities of 15 million euros between 2011 and 2014.

The alleged irregularities were mostly related to money that Ronaldo had in the Virgin Islands.

Barcelona's Lionel Messi was convicted of tax fraud last year. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Raps score draft pick from Magic for GM's release

The Toronto Raptors acquired a future second-round draft pick from the Orlando Magic on Thursday in exchange for the contractual release of Jeff Weltman. The Magic named Weltman as president of basketball operations Tuesday.

Weltman had worked in the Raptors' front office since 2013 and was promoted to general manager last September. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto FC calls on secondary scorers

MLS

Reds will be without top two strikers against Crew

Jozy Altidore will cheer from the sidelines while serving a suspension. Sebastian Giovinco is in the final stages of recovering from an injury.

Toronto FC hosts the Columbus Crew on Friday night without their star strikers but as coach Greg Vanney pointed out Thursday, Toronto's depth has been a significant factor in its seven-game unbeaten streak. And it's about to be tested once again.

"Scoring goals," Vanney said with a laugh when asked about the challenges TFC faces without Altidore and Giovinco. "But I think it's the opportunity for other players to step in.

"Obviously Jozy and Seba account for quite a few of our goals."

They have 12 goals between them. The rest of the roster has a combined eight.

"Obviously Tosaint (Ricketts) has been that guy as the third forward who's come in and (scored)," Vanney continued. "We have other guys who are capable of stepping up, we have creators, we have guys who will get in goal-scoring positions. But the easy answer to that is we lose our top two strikers — and guys who quite frankly other defences fear a little bit more in the grand scheme of things — but we'll come with something that we believe will also score goals and create goals (Friday)."

8

TFC is looking for its first eight-game unbeaten run since 2010.

Columbus is the lone team to beat TFC — who've gone 6-0-1 in their unbeaten streak — in MLS play this season.

The teams split their two matches in Columbus. The Crew won 2-1 on April 15 and Toronto took the rematch by the same score on May 10.

Ricketts scored two late goals in the Toronto victory and he'll be counted on again Friday. The Canadian forward said stepping up in place of Altidore and Giovinco won't "only be on my shoulders but the entire team."

"We go into this game as a group, we know what we need to do, and we want to close out the Trillium Cup and keep the Cup here at home," Ricketts said. "Same objective as usual."

It was odd scheduling, Vanney said, to have Toronto and Columbus play three times before the end of May.

"It's a lot to play the same team in such a short period of time, especially when it's an important matchup," he said. "A little surprising that we don't see them later in the year, at least, when everything seems to be a little bit more on the line."

THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto FC is counting on Tosaint Ricketts to pick up the offensive slack with Jozy Altidore and Sebastian Giovinco out of the lineup for Friday night's match. CHRIS YOUNG/THE CANADIAN PRESS

ON THE MEND

There is good news for in that Sebastian Giovinco is on pace to make a return to the lineup next week.

- The 30-year-old hasn't played since straining a quadriceps muscle against Minnesota on May 13.
- He has practised the last two days and could be cleared to play in the June 3 game versus New England.

MAKE IT TONIGHT

Flavourful Turkey and Gruyere Burgers

Ceri Marsh & Laura Keogh
For Metro Canada

Turkey burger skeptics listen up! Transform the mild taste of turkey meat with a major hit of flavour thanks to herbes de Provence and gooey Gruyere cheese making these babies true grilled greats..

Ready in 30 minutes
Prep time: 10 minutes
Cook time: 20 minutes

Ingredients
- 1 lb. ground lean turkey meat
- 1/4 cup finely diced onion (or sometimes I drop the onion in my food processor and process it so it's more a paste so little ones don't want to pick it out of their burgers)
- 1/2 cup finely diced
- Gruyere cheese
- 3 Tbsp herbes de Provence
- 1/2 tsp salt

Directions

1. In a large bowl, mix the turkey meat with the onion, cheese herbes de Provence and salt. Form into 6 patties or 8 -10 sliders. Preheat your grill.

2. Cook the patties on the grill or in a frying pan over medium heat for about 10 minutes, flipping once, and then cook for another 8 to 10 minutes. Remove from the grill or frying pan when the patties have an internal temperature of 180 F.

3. Serve on fresh buns with your family's favourite fixings.

IT'S ALL IN THE STARS Your daily horoscope by Francis Drake

Aries March 21 - April 20
This is a positive day! You're full of mental energy and enthusiasm. All of your relationships with others will be upbeat and energetic.

Taurus April 21 - May 21
This is an excellent day for business and commerce. Look for ways to boost your income or make intelligent decisions about how you earn your money. You might shop till you drop today!

Gemini May 22 - June 21
This is a strong day for you. Both the Sun and the Moon are in your sign, and the Moon is dancing with Mars and Venus. This energizes you in a wonderful way.

Cancer June 22 - July 23
Even though you are working behind the scenes today, you will be charming with bosses, parents and others. It's quite likely that someone will seek your advice about how to make something look better.

Leo July 24 - Aug. 23
Travel for pleasure will please you today. A friend or member of a group might help you make this dream come true.

Virgo Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
You are high-viz at this time, because the Sun is at the top of your chart. Plus, your ambition is aroused! This is an excellent day to discuss shared property and inheritances.

Libra Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
Discussions about politics, religion and racial issues will be lively and intelligent today. You have focus, and you know what you want to achieve.

Scorpio Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
If you are involved in disputes about inheritances or shared property, you will defend your own best interests and the interests of others with vigor. There is no moss growing on you!

Sagittarius Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
Conversations with partners and close friends are lively today. Get out and enjoy yourself. Social situations, sports events and playful activities with children will appeal to you.

Capricorn Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
This is a strong day at work because you have energy and focus. Expect to accomplish a lot. You also might entertain or redecorate at home. Busy you!

Aquarius Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
This is a flirtatious, prankish and playful day. Enjoy all social outings. Make plans to have fun with someone you like.

Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
This is a good day for a family meeting or discussion. Big changes are taking place at home, and today you can direct these changes the way you want.
